RUMPUS STARTED

At Lexington In the Burley Tobacco
Society By 113 Stockholders.

Lexington, Ky., November 8.—A. W. Slaughter, M. W. Douthett and 111 other stockholders in the million-dollar Burley Tobacco Company, filed suit in Circuit Court, asking that the officials of that company be enjoined from refusing to allow them to examine the books and records.

The petition states that all the defendants are now stockholders in the corporation and following their names are listed and shares of stock owned by each member.

The par value of each share so held is given at $1. The grievance as set out in the suit is that the stockholders have repeatedly requested that they be allowed to examine the books and records and that the defendant has refused and continues to refuse to allow them to do so and will not fix a reasonable time for such an examination.

The examination has long been a bone of contention between the company and the 40,000 stockholders of the company in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana.

NEW TRAIN SERVICE

The L. & N. Will Run a Through Train
From Chicago To Jacksonville, Fla.

That the Louisville & Nashville railroad will make a strong bid for the passenger traffic to winter quarters in the South is shown by the announcement of a special train service from Chicago to Jacksonville, Fla., to be inaugurated November 21. Through trains will be run from Chicago to Cincinnati over the Pennsylvania lines and be transferred to the lines of the L. & N. There will be no change in the regular number of trains now employed on the L. & N., but the new service will take the place of trains No. 32 and No. 33. The equipment, it is said, will be the finest of any railroad in the South, the trains being made up of all steel vestibule coaches and passengers from the North can go through without a change.

The civil term of the Harrison Circuit Court convenes next Monday. There will be no commonwealth cases and no grand jury.

Basket Ball Notes

MAYSVILLE TO PLAY HERE FRI-DAY EVENING.

Faculty Manager G. C. Mance and Student Manager J. Ed. Parker, of the Maysville High School boys' basketball team, have closed arrangements with Prof. E. L. Dix, of the Mayslick High School for the fast Mayslick first and second boys' basketball teams to play the Maysville High School first and second basketball teams a game in this city Friday evening, November 12. The game promises to be one of the best of the year, as both teams claim the championship of the county, neither team having been defeated by a county team last season and defeating several. The local High School boys will hold several stiff practices with the High School team this week and will, no doubt, be able to put up a stiff game when the gong rings Friday.

CAPTAIN ELECTED.
The basketball squad of the Maysville High School elected Roy Hampton, senior, captain of the 1915-16 basketball team. Hampton deserved the honor bestowed upon him, as he has been one of the most consistent players Maysville High School has ever had.

The basketball squad also elected J. Ed. Parker, Jr., also a senior, as student manager of the team. Parker has had several years' experience in basketball and should make the High School boys a good pilot. The girls of the school will meet in a few days and elect officers of their basketball squad.

Cox, Monday, Mr. Britte was born December 8, 1825, and would have been 90 years old had he lived until the eighth of next month. He has been very feeble for some time and his death was not unexpected.

He followed the river the greater part of his life and was well known by old rivermen. Fifty years previous to the day of his death he and Captain James Hawley signed up as pilots on the old Gray Eagle at Cincinnati.

His daughter, Mrs. Cox, is the only surviving member of his family.

Citizens' Rally Meeting Wednesday Night.

In view of the great interest taken in the movement and the good attendance at the "smoker" meeting at the City Council Chamber held Friday night, arrangements have been made to hold a citizens' rally meeting in the interest of the movement for the new Chamber of Commerce, the meeting to be held Wednesday night. The place of holding the meeting will be announced later. Mr. A. W. McKeand, president of the McKeand Service Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., which is assisting the local campaign committee in perfecting the new organization, will speak at the Wednesday evening meeting, as will also Mr. Thomas Boone, who for some time has been secretary of the commercial organization at Johnson City, Tenn.

The movement for the new Chamber of Commerce is gaining impetus each day. Our people realize the importance of having such an organization for Maysville and what it will mean in the future development of the commercial, industrial and civic interests of the city. It is pretty generally realized that the membership dues of $12.50 will be one of the best investments efficient citizens can make. It will certainly bring splendid returns and there is now no doubt that a fund sufficient will be raised to put over a strong, well-financed Chamber of Commerce here.

IMPROVING BUILDING.

Carpenters are at work on the P. H. Traxel & Company building, getting it in shape for the holiday season. A large dining hall and banquet room will be built on the second floor, large enough to accommodate several hundred people. This room will be used every day in which to serve dinners to the many patrons of this establishment who are now served in the lee cream parlor on the first floor of the building. In a few days the new hall will be ready for use and will be occupied at once.

Mrs. John Barbour left Monday morning for Louisville, called there by the illness of her sister, Miss Phillips.

STANLEY BEATEN

NO MATTER WHAT
"RETURNS" SHOW

THREE CONTESTS INSTITUTED BY REPUBLICANS TO SECURE AN HONEST COUNT—WILL
FILE MORE IF NEC-ESSARY.

"Every Vote Cast For Morrow Must Be Counted For Morrow."
Is the Slogan.

(Louisville Herald.)

Louisville, Ky., November 8.—With the official count still lacking certification in four counties, it still appears from the face of the returns that Edwin P. Morrow, Republican, of Somerset, was elected Governor of Kentucky at last Tuesday's election.

Democratic sources are still claiming the official count will show Stanley elected by a margin of 400 to 700 votes.

As a matter of fact, Edwin P. Morrow has won the certificate of nomination in one of the most wonderful races in the history of Kentucky. It makes but little difference what margin, if any, is claimed by Mr. Stanley and his supporters. Stanley knows he is a beaten man. His managers at Democratic headquarters know that he has been defeated. Furthermore, every Democratic newspaper in Louisville knows that their "champion" has been rejected by a clear majority.

Many Contests Waiting.

In the face of tremendous odds, Edwin P. Morrow has been elected Governor of Kentucky. If, when the official count is ended, it happens that Stanley pulls through with a margin of the votes, there are a hundred contests waiting. The favorable decision of 5 per cent of these would give Morrow a comfortable margin of victory.

Kentuckians are in no humor to tolerate another election "steal." Republicans and Democrats alike will protest when "Democrats Take State," as one afternoon paper boldly proclaimed a few days ago.

False reports are in circulation to the effect that if the official count shows Stanley to have won, the Republicans "intend to lay down." There is no truth in any such statement. Republican campaign managers are confident they have elected Mr. Morrow fairly and intend to "go the limit" to see that he gets the certificate of election. All they ask is a fair count. They want nothing more and they will accept nothing else.

Count Must Be Honest.

No expense will be spared to see that every vote cast for Morrow is counted for Morrow. As an evidence of their earnestness in this matter, two suits were filed by attorneys for Morrow Saturday, one at Owensboro, in Daviess county, and the other at Paducah, in McCracken county. Republicans at Owensboro allege that Stanley is not entitled to thirty votes credited to him through a clerical error. At Paducah the Morrow men filed suit to have more than 125 ballots cast for Morrow counted. Election officials admit the ballots are valid, but can not count them because of the technicality that judges of election failed to note on the back of an envelope that the ballots had not been counted. The Republicans filed a third suit in Hart county.

THAT "TRIUMPH"

There is cumulative evidence that the "great diplomatic triumph" of the administration over Germany falls far short of being a triumph at all, and that it was due to British success in combatting the U-boat operations more than any skill of Mr. Wilson as a note-writer.

The British navy has largely increased its supply of undersea craft, and has seriously depleted the German submarine list. The U-boat campaign which Von Tirpitz planned has been a naval and an economic failure. The loss of British merchant ships from this cause has never exceeded 1 per cent of the total possible victims, while its cost to Germany, in boats as well as in money and men, has been wholly disproportionate.

Therefore, the German government really surrendered nothing in its plausible, and unreal concessions to Mr. Wilson. But the latter has sought to masquerade in a victor's robes. The stage was well set and the only trouble with the performance was that it was not the last act. The final scene was staged in London, where it became known that the British navy had taken a costly toll of German submarines and had really won the controversy for the American State Department. If every one is to be elected President because of the episode, the most deserving candidate is Sir John Jellicoe, whose ships did what Mr. Wilson's typewriter was incapable of procuring.

Every day we see or hear of something mighty good and praiseworthy about some one in this town, and it just clinches us in the opinion that it is a "good place to live." And we hear and see good deeds and traits of the farmers out in the country, and that, too, gives us a mighty fine feeling. A person might travel a long way and see many worse places to live than in this town and among these good town and country people. It suits us.

HAVE YOU?

Today a corps of earnest and energetic instructors are laboring to implant in the minds of the children of the community that knowledge which will enable them to cope with the innumerable obstacles which beset the rocky road of life.

What have you done to encourage the teachers? Have you been to the school to lend them the inspiration of your presence, to let them know and understand that your heart is with them in their work of educating your children?

Your visit may not mean much to you, but it has its effect upon both pupil and instructor. To the pupil it is an evidence that while they are in the hands of others they are yet uppermost in your thoughts and that you are keeping a watchful parental eye to their welfare. To the instructors it signifies your moral support, your confidence in their efficiency and your undiminished interest in the welfare of both.

How many farmers in this section of the country have a clear idea as to the best method of securing good roads? Doubtless most of them have given the subject more or less serious thought, and if they would only get together occasionally and talk it over some one would be able to advance a plan that would be practical and easy of solution. Let's have a meeting or two, Brother Farmers! A few of you get together and select a date and place and then tell us about it and we will announce it in advance in the paper and hustle up a big attendance. There are but few things we can not do if we only make up our minds to succeed.

A fellow started to read us the riot act the other day because we suppressed a certain unsavory piece of news. But when we mentioned a certain indiscretion of his which he thought was unknown he immediately saw the wisdom of our forbearance. But it's just human nature, you know. Fun---Well Done

Pat's Ticket.

An Irishman had not been long in this country and wished to go to New York. Not knowing how to ask for his ticket, he concluded he would wait until he heard somebody else ask for one. A young lady wishing to go to Elizabeth, N. J., stepped up and said, "Elizabeth, single."

Pat said, "That's the way ye do it." Then, going to the ticket office, he said, "Pat Murphy, married."

Advice From An Expert.

An old negro mammy, says Everybody's Magazine, had a family of boys so well behaved that one day her mistress asked:

"Sally, how did you raise your boys so well?"
"Ah! tell yo', missus," answered Sally, "Ah raise dem boys with a barrel stove, an' Ah raise 'em frequent."

A BUSINESS DEAL

By LOUISE OLIVER.

Richard Adrian was a rich bachelor. That was why he was on the list of every concern in America that had something to sell. His daily mail was chock-full of advertisements of all kinds, from pastry flour to gold mines. And he was hourly besieged by agents of both sexes who insisted upon showing him "only editions" and improved razors.

Mike, the office boy, was able to dissuade too persistent males, but Dorothy Darlington was prepared for Mike. She had heard of him, and, arming herself for the ball game, Mike went down an easy victim.

Richard Adrian had decided that it was near enough to noon to escape from involuntary incarceration, as he always referred to his office, when Dorothy breezed in and shut the door. "How do you do? Please don't blame your boy for letting me in. He couldn't help it. I'm sorry if you were getting ready to go home, because I can't afford many half-gate tickets, you know."

"I'm sorry I can't ask you to sit down. You see I must get away immediately." This was the prettiest one yet, and he had no desire to exercise his masculine wits against beauty in bloom. "Oh, I am so sorry. I wanted to sell you some life insurance."

"Great Scott! I've got twenty-five thousand that I don't need. Besides, I'm not married, and haven't any wife to leave it to."

"But couldn't you get married?" "Yes, yes, I suppose so. We'll sit down, Miss Darlington. I'll take five thousand of your insurance, but we'll say—in favor of my sister, to be transferred just as soon as I can find a suitable wife."

"How lovely!" exclaimed Dorothy, searching for papers in her bag. I think I am going to like the insurance business."

Two months later Dorothy had to get past Mike again. Never mind how she managed it, but she did.

This time she was asked to sit down. "But, really, I cannot take any more insurance, Miss Darlington. I've made all my second cousins beneficiaries now."

"But it isn't insurance this time," she declared. "It's a house. I'm selling real estate now. Nobody but you would take any insurance!"

"But, I don't want a house, either. I'm not married, you see, and—"

"Oh, haven't you got a wife yet? You said you would, so I supposed you had. I'm just crazy about it myself. All porches and gables and a sun parlor and a lawn and a garden. I have a picture of it here. There! Isn't it beautiful? Only the colors don't show up—the flowers and grass and trees, I mean."

Richard looked harder at the flushed cheeks and shining eyes than he did at the picture, but it really was an attractive house. It was a fine day, and his car was at the curb.

"I won't promise to buy the place, but I might take a look at it, Miss Darlington." "Won't you go with me in my car and show it to me?"

The house was all that Dorothy claimed, and Richard Adrian enjoyed the excursion immensely. "Not a bad speculation," he thought. "I believe I'll take it over."

So the deal was made and things settled down as before.

Some weeks later Mike opened the office door. "A lady to see you, sir," he announced.

"I am so glad to find you in," exclaimed Dorothy Darlington, as Richard Adrian hospitably held out his hand and proffered a chair.

"And I am glad you came, Miss Darlington. There is only one thing I am sorry for—that I cannot buy another house. You see I am property poor now, and—"

"But I'm not selling houses this time. I'm in the jewelry business now. I've brought a catalog and thought you might want something for your wife, if you have one yet."

"No, I'm not married yet."

"Oh! Aren't you? I was sure you would be by this time. And there are such beautiful things here in the book—pendants, brooches, bracelets and rings. I'm crazy about all of them myself."

Richard looked at her oddly. "Your enthusiasm is certainly contagious," he said. "Won't you tell me what you like best?"

She bent over and touched the open pages here and there where jeweled ornaments were pictured.

"And what ring do you like best?" "This one!" She turned a few pages and pointed to a ruby and diamond set together.

Richard looked at her softly waving hair under the becoming little hat, her clear, velvety skin, and her frank blue eyes. He had been dreaming dreams of late.

"Miss Darlington, you've insured my life and sold me a house for a prospective bride, who hasn't materialized. Now you want to sell me a ring for the same mythological person. Unless you can supply the wife, too, I'm afraid there is no use in buying the ring."

"The wife? I don't understand." "Won't you be my wife, Dorothy? I love you. You'd better say 'Yes' if you want to sell me the ring. Won't you?"

She did not speak, but he read his answer in her happy eyes.

Legend of Belgian Lace-makers. Once upon a time there was a girl, a dark-eyed Venetian girl, who had a lover—all Venetian girls had, once upon a time. She was a lace-maker. He was a sailor. One day when he had just returned from the Indian seas he showed him the lace she had been making. Thereupon he tossed into her lap a wonderfully delicate piece of coral and told her it was lace the mermaids wove in their caves deep under the sea.

And when he had gone again she set herself to weave her bridal veil; after the pattern of the coral she wove. Flimsy seaweed, fluted shells, tiny sea-horses and starfish grew under her hand until at last the veil was finished and it was time for her lover to return. This is a real story, so—he came back, and they were married, she in the veil it had pleased her fancy to make. Whether the wedding was a quiet one or not, all Venice heard of the veil. Queens and princesses sought her out and "point de Venise" became the rage.—Vogue.

ROAD BUILDING

CONVICTS AS ROAD BUILDERS

Need for Co-Operation Between State Highway and State Prison Departments Is Outlined.

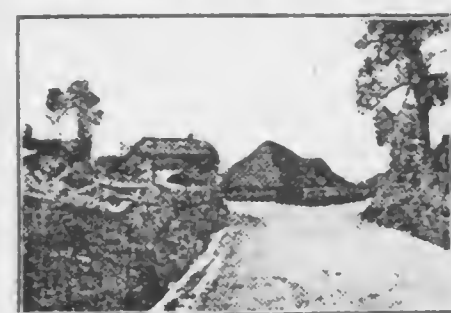

"The state highway department should hire convicts from the state prison department in exactly the same way as it would hire free laborers, and at the same price per day. During the hours of work the men should not be thought of as convicts, but simply as employees of the highway department. No payment should be made for a single hour not worked and a man discharged should be removed at once and permanently, while the highway department should have no responsibility for nor authority over the convicts at any time nor in any manner except to conduct their work or to discharge them."

This need for co-operation between the state highway and state prison departments is strongly urged in a report made to the New York state highway department by David J. Shore, who was in charge of the convict road work in Green county, New York, during the summer of 1914.

Mr. Shore's practical experience has demonstrated the importance of the recommendation for co-operation between the highway and prison departments in conducting convict road work, which the national committee on prisons and prison labor has advocated for a number of years and has been instrumental in embodying into the laws of the state of West Virginia.

The work in Green county, New York, was carried on under most difficult conditions. The men arrived at the camp before the organization and equipment were completed. They were sent there without regard to their suitability for the work and almost one-fourth were totally unfit, and had to be returned to the prison. Arrangements for feeding the men were unsatisfactory, while winter made efficient work impossible fully two weeks before they were removed from the camp.

In spite of these difficulties Mr. Shore reports that, taking the 60 convicts who were retained at the camp, and comparing them with 51 civilians also working at the camp, the convicts averaged better than the civilians.

and as good as any ordinary contract gang. Under proper conditions he maintains there will be no difficulty in using convicts for this type of work with good results for the money expended.

The national committee on prisons and prison labor calls special attention to this report and its conclusion that two factors are essential to the success of convict road work. Responsibility for administration must be placed in the hands of those competent to meet it, and the men encouraged through a system of rewards so that they feel they have something to gain through good work.

LOSS CAUSED BY ROAD THIEF

Farmer Forced to Haul Small Loads and Deprive Him of Opportunity to Sell Products.

The bad-road thief forces you to haul small loads; drive slowly; wrench and twist the life out of your horse, harness and vehicle, often breaking and damaging the latter untold sums, and expending delays are occasioned. It also steals your opportunity to dispose of your farm when you wish to sell, for no man will pay as much for a farm bordered by a poor road system as he will for one with a well-kept highway, and some will not buy a farm at all when the road is poor. The loss of time and money, where the above named conditions exist, makes it imperative that you open all the drain ditches along the road, drag this silent, notorious thief to death with the King road drag.

Built Up Rural Communities.

What we need is good roads and modern houses. Help the farmer secure these and you will do more toward building up the rural communities than any other two things.

Dangerous Road.

A road is a road—but when it is a high, narrow grade with steep slides and a flat surface, it is a poor road and a dangerous one.

Brings Farms Nearer Town.

A farm ten miles from town on a hard road is nearer than a farm five miles from town on a soft road.

Learn to Make Roads.

We need more men out learning how to make roads than locating routes to make them on.

Weeping Trees.

One of the wonders of plant life is the weeping tree of the Canary Islands. It is of the laurel family, and rains down copious shower of water drops from its tufted foliage. This water is often collected at the foot of the tree and forms a kind of pond, from which the inhabitants of the neighborhood can supply themselves with a beverage that is absolutely fresh and pure.

The water comes out of the tree itself through innumerable little pores situated at the margin of the leaves. It issues from the plant as vapor during the daytime, when the heat is sufficiently great to preserve it in that condition; but in the evening, when the temperature has lowered very much, a considerable quantity of it is exuded in the form of liquid drops that collect near the edges of the leaves until these members so heeled down that the tears tumble off on the ground below in a veritable shower.

The Army of Heaven

By REV. L. W. GOSNELL
Superintendent of Men, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—God's host.—Gen. 22:2.

The angels compose the army of heaven. The captain of this host of the Lord is no other than Jesus Christ, and it was he, we think, who appeared as the angel of the Lord in the Old Testament, the multitude of those who bow to his command is suggested by the fact that in the garden of Gethsemane he might have called for twelve legions of angels and they would have been given him; they are said to number ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands.

We would speak of two instances especially in which this shining host has figured.

The first has to do with the story of Jacob. He was on his way back from Haran after an exile of twenty years. Thoughts of meeting Esau on the morrow troubled him, for he was learning that "sins come home to roost." How beautiful to read, "And Jacob went on his way and the angels of God met him. And when Jacob saw them, he said, 'This is God's host; and he called the name of the place Mahanaim,' i. e., two hosts. The idea which he expresses is this: that while about him is his little encampment, all unprepared to meet Esau and his four hundred men at war, yet above him is God's army for his defense.

The other instance is referred to in the Thirty-fourth Psalm: "The angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him, and delivereth them." This Psalm seems to have been written when David was fleeing from Saul. The night before his escape from the cave of Adullam, he was with him, but his faith saw the mountains full of God's chariots, and expressed itself in the words we have quoted. It will be noted that he refers to the angel of the Lord who is at the head of the heavenly army, but his words include the vast multitude which camps about the saint.

In this age the question may be raised as to whether such a truth has any importance for us: Indeed some may even feel that to speak of angels puts a barrier between us and God. But if we will understand that these are simply his messengers fulfilling the voice of his word, the difficulty vanishes. We have in mind a couple of incidents which show that this truth may become of vital concern in times of danger.

For example, the biographer of Mrs. John Scudder, wife of the famous missionary to India, tells of a most interesting experience in her life. With her children she was being carried through the jungle by native bearers. The tent had been pitched for the night and this frail woman with her babes was looking to her servants for protection; but as twilight deepened, the roar of lions and tigers began sounding through the jungle and struck terror into the hearts of the men. One after another took to flight, leaving this woman and her children alone among the wild beasts. She prayed to God for protection and it was granted her. That her danger was real is shown by the fact that she heard the lions and tigers sniffing about her tent in the night; and yet no paw was raised against her, and when the morning dawned her children were sleeping in peace and safety.

Her biographer suggests an explanation which is worthy of attention. He says: "There was an inner circle; for the angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him and delivereth them."

Again this subject is suggested in the last entry found in the journal of that Christian soldier, Chien Tsien Gordon. As is well known, he lost his life in the siege of Khartoum. The reinforcements came all too late, but nevertheless the faith of this man did not fail. He says in his closing entry: "The hosts are with us—Mahanaim! It is Jacob's old word, and shows that the faith of this Christian hero realized that God had sent his angels. It is true that Gordon lost his life; but he could lay it down in the confidence that it was not because God had left him without protection, but that in the wisdom of his heavenly Father his death was permitted."

Buddhist Priest Becomes Christian. A priest of Buddha, in the city of Sylmar, Burma, has become a disciple of Christ. Such instances are very rare—for a priest of Buddha, protected and cared for, lives a life of ease. His position is exalted and his followers worship him. Having a knowledge of herbs and roots, he will become a Burmese doctor and go among his people, healing the sick and preaching Christ.

"Whom are you going to charge those goods to?" asked the department manager. "What was her name?"

"Why, Miss. Miss. Miss.," stammered the clerk, as he scratched his head.

"Just miscellaneous, I guess," the boss cut in sarcastically.

QUALITY TO BE CULTIVATED

Not Altogether a Matter of Curiosity in Asking a Woman if "She is Vain Enough."

That may seem a strange question to ask most women, for, according to the opinions of the other sex, we possess all the vainglorious tendencies of the peacock, and then some; but there are women, and we all know them, who are not vain enough. They really could not care about their personal appearance, or they would not let the wisps of hair float unrestrained about otherwise half-dressed coiffures, or noses go shiny when the least dab of powder would remedy matters. It is not so much one's personal appearance that counts, for, after all, such people will tell you that they would rather take the time for improving their souls or their minds, or something equally intangible, but one should remember that one owes a certain amount of visible personal charm to one's neighbors; that even if you do not care whether your hair lies flat and unbecoming on your head, other people get some pleasure out of seeing you with a fluffy, prettily arranged coiffure. Again, there is a psychological effect from well grooming. A good complexion, beautiful hands and nails, becomingly arranged hair, a good, erect figure all act upon one's manners. A wave in the hair will take the kinks out of one's disposition. So cultivate enough vanity to make you always look your best and to emphasize your own good points.

MONEY WAS EASILY EARNED

But Manufacturer Got What He Wanted and Paid for Knowledge Chemist Had Acquired.

A manufacturer of some patent compound came into the laboratory of an analytical chemist one day with a bottle containing an unwholesome-looking mixture.

"I would give $100," he said, "to know what would make the water and oil in this mixture separate."

The chemist looked at the bottle.

"Very well," he said, "write out your check."

"Check?" the other echoed.

"Yes, your check for $100. You say you are willing to give that, and for that price I am willing to tell you what will make the water and oil separate."

The visitor hesitated a moment, and then wrote a check for the sum named. The chemist carefully deposited it in his pocketbook, and then quietly dropped into the liquid a pinch of common salt.

Instantly the water and oil separated, and whether the client was satisfied or not, he had got what he wanted and he had paid his own price for it.

WAY TO FASTEN WIRE FENCE

It Is Not Desirable to Place Staples or Hoops in Green Concrete—Simple Plan Is Described.

There are numerous methods of attaching wire fencing to concrete posts. Some makers place staples or wire loops in the green concrete; others make holes in the posts. The former method is not desirable because the fastener cannot be located exactly where the wire of the fencing will come when the post is set in the ground; then, too, the fastener will eventually rust or break off and will thus injure the looks of the post. On the other hand, holes through the posts weaken them, and therefore this method is, in general, unsatisfactory.

The simplest, easiest and cheapest way of fastening a wire fence to a concrete post is by encircling the post with a wire one size less than the corresponding wire in the fence proper and by twisting this wire around the strand of the fence. This is done in two ways. The fastening wire is placed around the post, twisted upon itself and then to the fence wire; or one end of the fastening wire is twisted around the fence wire, and the free end is then carried around the post and twisted on the other side to the same wire. Either plan is good, but care must be taken to draw the fastening wire tight, or else stock trying to get through the fence may raise or crush down the fence wire.

If any trouble is experienced, the post should be roughened at the fastening point with a cold chisel.

Expansion and contraction of the fence due to heat and cold are cared for by the tension curves or "kinks" in the woven-wire fencing, and no fear may be felt in drawing the fastening wires as tight as necessary. Wooden nailing strips should never be embedded in the posts, for moisture will swell the wood and crack the concrete.

DON'T GIVE UP WHEAT CROP

Some Farmers Discouraged Because of Lateness in Getting Threshing Done—Disk Is Handy Tool.

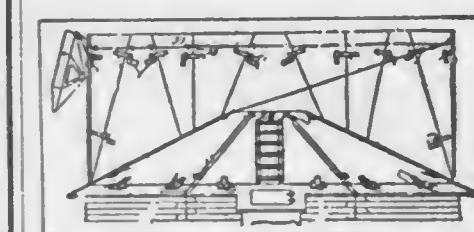

In all probability some who planned to sow wheat this fall are about to give it up owing to the lateness of the season in getting the threshing done. To be sure, it is better to plow early for wheat if you can, but if you cannot, then do the next best thing—plow as soon as possible. It would help in getting a good seedbed to double-disk the ground before plowing, then plow five or six inches deep and follow with disk and corrugated crusher alternately several times. The most fields now have quite a crop of weeds and grass which will tend to make air spaces in the seedbed. Wheat will not hold well through the winter in a seedbed that contains air spaces. Most people do not think of a disk as in any way connecting with compacting the ground, but it is more effective in filling in air spaces than any other tool.

What about your seed wheat? Is it good? If it isn't, better sell it and buy of someone who threshed early and has good seed. The difference in price would be well spent.

roofs, tops and covers have been devised to allow the filling several feet above the top, so that when settling in all over the silo will be nearly full. The roof shown here is adjustable, being the recent patent of a Galesburg, Ill., inventor. The roof opens out to extend the silo upward perpendicularly when being filled. After settling, this roof can be folded up to make a closed top that sheds rain and keeps out snow. Independently elevatable sections, one of them having a cap attached, are locked together.

GIVE GOD THANKS

Especially at This Time His Children Should Not Fail to Show Gratitude.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits."—Psalm 103:1-2.

The Feast of Tabernacles, which was the Jewish thanksgiving festival by divine appointment, may suggest to us in large part the spirit and manner in which our national Thanksgiving day can be most fittingly observed. The people were directed to turn aside from their accustomed secular pursuits and devote the time being to celebrating the goodness of God in grateful and joyful recognition of all that he had done for them. It was a religious feast, but had its social features, which were also of beneficial effect.

It was intended to specially impress upon the minds of the Israelites a proper sense of God's gracious dealings with them, and to call forth their gratitude in consequence. He had kindly cared for them; he had brought them into the pleasant and fertile land. He had promised them, and had given them bountiful harvests; and it was a good thing for them to have an annual thanksgiving feast during which to recall his blessings to them and praise his great goodness. They would thus be moved to ascribe to him the many benefits they enjoyed and to express their feeling of obligation and gratitude to him.

Ingratitude is a great sin and a very common one. There is too much of a disposition to forget that all our blessings come from God. There is also an inclination to dwell upon the seeming evils and disadvantages of life. It is eminently fitting, therefore, that we should pause at times in the midst of our worldly cares and occupations, and review the mercies of God toward us and see how much reason and occasion we have for gratitude to him.

Thank Him for Gifts.

Thank God for your being and for all the mercies with which he has crowned your lives. Thank him for your homes and their comforts, for health and friends, for sustaining grace under trouble and deliverance from evil, for the privileges and blessings of his Gospel and his church; for this highly favored land in whose pleasant places your lines are cast, for abundant harvests and the large measure of prosperity that has attended us as a people. Thank him, too, for the trials and sufferings that have come upon you. A man is especially blessed who has passed through some form of good. "Men are prone to thank God for those prosperities of vine and mead and shop and ship which made life easy and comfortable; but they are rarely grateful for those happenings which make life difficult and divinely fortunate; not when his conditions are easy, but when they evoke the very best that is in him; when they provoke him to nobleness, and sting him into strength; when they clear his vision, kindle his enthusiasm and inspire his will."

Another purpose that the Thanksgiving Feast of Tabernacles subserved was that it taught the supreme importance of spiritual realities. It directed attention to that which is higher and better than that which pertains exclusively to the worldly and to people were to turn their thoughts to a while specially to God and his goodness and his worship. They were to remember that true life is found in the way of righteousness. In useful service for the glory of God and the good of man. Our thanksgiving must have its true counterpart in thanks living. We must give the chief place to spiritual and eternal things. This will make life what it is designed to be.

Home Foundation of All.

The Feast of Tabernacles afforded an opportunity for the reunion of families and friends and for social intercourse. In keeping with this is the character of our Thanksgiving day. It is a time for the social gathering together, in the old homestead or elsewhere, of the various members of the family, old and young. The home is a divine institution. It is at the foundation of good government and national prosperity. Religion makes the home what it ought to be. In proportion as Christian precept is heeded, the home becomes a place of hallowed affection and sweet and holy and elevating influence. "Moral depravity in the family is the inevitable prelude to public corruption." The safety and welfare of the nation depend upon the purity and sanctity of the domestic life.

This is the practical significance of our national Thanksgiving festival, and if we lay to heart the great truths and lessons for which it stands, they will help to qualify us for the faithful discharge of our duty to God and to our country, to our neighbor and ourselves.—Rev. John Bruhaker, D. D.

Always Work to Do.

Sad will be the day for any man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life he is living, with the thoughts he is thinking and the deeds that he is doing—when there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul some great desire to do something larger which he knows that he is meant and made to do because he is a child of God.—Phillips Brooks.

GINGHAM A FAVORITE

NO BETTER MATERIAL FOR CHILDREN'S DRESSES.

Plaids Probably Will Be Found the Choice of Most Mothers—Easy to Form Combinations That Are Highly Effective.

The new gingham are great favorites for children's dresses. Plaids predominate. While the decided blue and white and the red and white are in evidence, black and white is very popular, partly due to the fact that this plaid launders well and is a dressy combination.

A striking dress is made of this striped gingham, in a combination of straight and bias widths. Not a particle of trimming is used other than the gingham itself. The circular yoke of the skirt reaches just below the hips, and is made of the material cut bias, a seam in the front of the yoke bringing the stripes together within a point, from which they extend downward and toward the back. The blouse is made of the goods cut straight, plaid and joined to the yoke with a tucklike effect. The waist is made with a round yoke, with a seam in the center, at which the stripes meet, with the same pointed effect as on the yoke of the skirt. The wide front plait of the waist is on the bias. The upper part of the sleeves is cut straight, with a cross-grained cuff about four inches long. Altogether the dress is a charming combination of lines, and will repay the evident care which is required to make it.

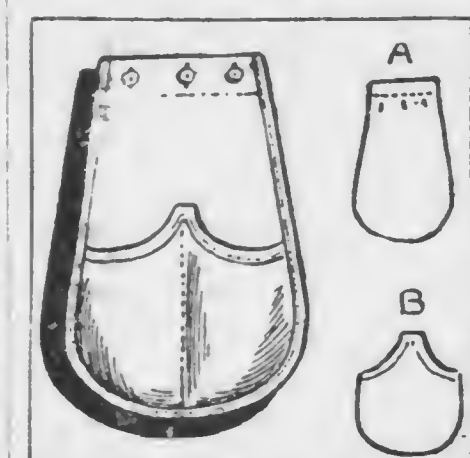

Many women will like to know how to cut a shirt waist from a small quantity of gingham or other printed material. Take the length required for the front, and cut it down the center. Add a box-plait to one side of each strip and insert a vest of pique of any other white goods you may have on hand. The sleeves sewed through both plait and vest will hold the right side in place, and the joining will be under the left plait. The strip for box-plaits can usually be taken off the widths used for sleeves. Another way to save material is to take two widths for the fronts, cutting the backs from what is a cross and placing them under what seems to be a panel, with a half-inch tuck on each side. This panel strengthens the back of the waist, and is especially becoming to a stout or short-waisted figure.

BUTTONS TO THE PETTICOAT

Design for Underpocket That Does Away With Many Complaints Formerly Heard.

Most underpockets are made with bands that fasten round the waist and consequently tend, though in a small degree, to increase the size of the waist. With the pocket shown in the accompanying illustration no band or straps are necessary, as it is arranged to button on to the petticoat itself. It is carried out in strong linen and bound where indicated with narrow ribbon.

It is cut out in two pieces of the shape shown in diagrams A and B, on the right of the illustration, and sewed together at the edges and down the center. The material is turned over at the top and sewed down at the point indicated by the dotted line in Fig. A, and in this portion three button-holes are made.

In corresponding positions, three small flat linen pockets are sewed on to the undershirt, so that the pocket can be fastened in position in a moment and equally easily removed when perhaps not for a time required.

For greater security, the part that forms the pocket might be fastened at top by press studs to the back.

Net for Little Girls.
Some lovely afternoon frocks for little girls are made of white wash net. The fabric is simple, yet is light and delicate enough to have a certain "party" air loved by children. One frock prettily developed in white net is made with a three-flounced skirt, a single rose fastened on each flounce. The bodice is made of a ruffle, like those on the skirts, gathered in above the waist line to form a full little petticoat, the sleeves, too, are narrow ruffles of net. It is all very simple, but very pretty.

Marabou Trimming.
Marabou is a smart trimming, and is seen on some charming evening coats and dancing frocks. Among the latter is a model of corn-colored jersey with low taffeta, edged with natural marabou around the wide skirt, the bodice being of pale brown silk net over cream-colored chiffon. A shirred lace hat is banded with marabou above the drooping, wired trim, and a parasol of brown and gold brocade silk has also an edge of marabou.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism untrained for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

EARLY HISTORY OF EUROPE

Confederation of Germanic Tribes the Foundation of Countries of Germany and France.

The name Franks was applied about the middle of the third century to a confederation of Germanic tribes dwelling on the middle and lower Rhine. Later they became divided into two principal groups—the Salians, inhabiting the districts on both sides of the lower Rhine, and the Ripuarians, settled on the middle Rhine. In the third and fourth centuries hordes of them began to move southwards and afterwards into Gaul.

In 358 Emperor Julian, although he defeated the Salian invaders, allowed them to establish themselves permanently in Toxandria, the country between the Meuse and the Scheldt. From this time Frankish chiefs and warriors frequently served in the Roman armies; and during the fifth century they rendered valuable service to the empire by stemming the tide of barbarian invasion. By this time the Salian Franks had made themselves masters of northern Gaul, while the Ripuarians were concentrated around Cologne. Under Clovis, or Clovis, king of the former confederation, the Franks were converted to Christianity, while by his conquests in central Gaul, and by his subjugation of the Alemanni and the Ripuarian Franks, he not only extended his dominions as far as the Loire in the one direction and the Maine in the other, but he laid the foundation of what subsequently developed into the kingdom of France.

The KITCHEN CABINET

It can never be too early or too late to encourage the habit of observation; nor can we ever become too wise to be taught by influences which all created things are designed to exert upon the mind.

SEASONABLE DISHES.
Oysters are now on the market, and though expensive for a daily diet will be most welcome as an occasional dish.

Poached Oysters on the Half Shell.—Butter as many scallop shells as there are individuals to serve; put into each shell six oysters with their own liquor, sprinkle with salt and pepper, paprika, tomato catchup and a drop or two of tabasco sauce. Put a few bits of butter here and there on the oysters and set the shells in a dripping pan, then into a hot oven. Serve as soon as the oysters look plump and the edges are curled. Toast points or brown bread and butter sandwiches will be good to serve with these. Set the shells on paper doilies on plates to serve.

Baked Whitefish, Oyster Sauce.—Split the fish and lay open with the skin-side down. Season with salt and pepper, and place in a baking pan on a bed of sliced pork. Bake in a quick oven, brushing it over once or twice with beaten egg and milk while cooking. Just before serving cover with buttered crumbs and bake until brown. Serve with oyster sauce.

Oyster Sauce.—Parboil a cupful of oysters in their own liquor, drain off this liquor into a cup and fill the cup with cream. Make of this a white sauce, season well with salt, pepper and celery salt, pouring a little of this over the fish, send the remainder to the table in a bowl to be served with it.

Creamed Fish Flakes on Toast.—Melt two tablespoonsful of butter, add two of flour and mix well, then add a cupful of milk and a dash of cream of red pepper. Add a can of fish flakes and let stand over the heat while toast is being prepared. Butter crisp rounds of toast and dip the edges in boiling water, then pour over the fish sauce.

Some experts like fried oysters dipped in milk to prepare them, rather than in egg and crumbs. Dip in milk, then in crumbs, then fry in butter, seasoning as they are cooking. Oysters are so delicate that they should be cooked but a short time or they become tough and tasteless.

MORE MARINES NEEDED.

New York, November 8.—Because of the shortage of men, the United States Marine Corps will be represented in the 1915 military show at Madison Square Garden.

The army and navy will be represented as usual, but the little Marine Corps is neither of these, and it can not afford to send even a platoon to the 1915 tournament.

"Soldiers of the sea," 9,521 in all, form the first line of defense of the United States, and it is not surprising that the Marine Corps has been asked to furnish the forces for Haiti, the legation at Peking, China, and Managua, Nicaragua, as well as manning the permanent frontier defense posts at Guantanamo, Cuba, the Philippines, Guam and the Hawaiian Islands.

Congress, at its next session, will be asked to increase the Marine Corps by 1,500 officers and men, and it is believed that the request has strong backing in the ranks of the security leagues who wish to see the first line of defense strengthened so as to insure an adequate number of marines at home in case of necessity.

GIVES BIRTH TO NINE CHILDREN IN EIGHTEEN MONTHS.

Lexington, Ky., November 5.—Mrs. Gailther Dewrey, of Spencer county, has a record today which it is believed has never been surpassed. In eighteen months she has given birth to nine children. Eighteen months ago three boys and two girls were born to her.

The girls died, but the three boys are doing fine. Today, as news reached here tonight, she gave birth to four boys, all of whom are healthy and doing nicely.

The mother is about 30 years old and apparently is getting along well. It is unusual record probably will be in a bill for mothers' pensions introduced in the coming Legislature.

The new city president, Frank Nash, visited the First Christian Sunday school Sunday.

Rev. Dr. H. O. Fry, of Norwood, O., in the absence of the pastor, delighted two enthusiastic audiences at the First Baptist church. Rev. H. B. Withyote is holding a very successful meeting in Dayton.

"Win-My-Chum" week at the Third Street M. E. church Epworth League, started off with a rush. If you have not arranged to attend their meetings, it will pay you to do so. This is one of the liveliest bunches of youngsters in the great big M. E. church. They are known throughout the entire United States for their work. This meeting is preparatory to the revival services which will begin next week. It will be held by Rev. D. Wendel Brown, the "mountain evangelist."

WEEK OF PRAYER, NOVEMBER 7 TO 13.

The annual Week of Prayer, appointed by the Woman's Missionary Council, will be observed by the local auxiliaries of the First M. E. church, South, Monday and Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. The adult auxiliary will have charge of the meetings, and Tuesday and Thursday at the same hour the Young People's Society, under the leadership of Mrs. Campbell, will render interesting programs. The topics for special study are "Work in Japan" and "The Japanese in the United States." The following clipping from the Missionary Bulletin explains the appropriation of the Thank Offering for 1915:

"Every auxiliary plan to observe the Week of Prayer this year, November 7-13. The entire support of the Pacific Coast Work of the Home Department depends upon the collections this year. How is this money appropriated? It supports five Oriental preachers; it supports a night school with two teachers at Alameda; it supports two kindergartens; it supports various settlement features like mothers' clubs, study hours, etc.; it helps in the upkeep of a Korean circuit of four appointments and a Japanese circuit of six appointments. If any auxiliary fails to contribute this year to the Week of Prayer fund, it will curtail the appropriation for this work and cut it out of a part in this important phase of home mission work. Nine thousand and seven hundred dollars must come through this Week of Prayer collection for the home work."

"The opening of the work of the Woman's Missionary Council in Japan depends upon liberal giving in every auxiliary during the Week of Prayer. The work to be undertaken is the support of six missionaries, nineteen Bible women, six kindergartens, and the Lambeth Memorial Bible Woman's Training School. The missionaries are Misses Maud Bonnell, Nellie Bennett, Ida Worth, Annie Bell Williams, Annette Gist and Charlie Holland. The last two are new and sailed in August. It will require $10,000 to enterprise this work. Let no auxiliary fail to have a part in it by both prayer and a liberal offering."

On Friday an all-day union meeting will be held, when topics of local and general interests will be discussed by representatives of the Women's Organizations of the various churches of the city. Programs will be published later.

SOME APPLES.

Mr. James Sweet, of the county, was in Mayville Saturday and gave a number of his friends some of the large apples that were grown on his farm. The apple, which is known as the Mann type, is about the largest ever grown in this vicinity. Some of the specimens shown were nearly twenty inches in circumference. They were grown without any artificial aid and were not sprayed to prevent disease. Many of the apples weighed more than a pound, and some weighed as much as two pounds. The tree that they grew on bore many equal to those shown, and the top limbs were so laden with fruit that they touched the ground. Mr. Sweet says he obtained five barrels of the same kind of apples he was showing off one tree, weighing nearly a ton.

He will move his family to Winchester within the next few days, where he will reside. His many friends in this city wish him all the success possible in his new undertaking.

TEACHERS IN OHIO

Must Teach—Not Permitted To Act As Representatives of Book Firms.

A principal or teacher, after accepting a contract to teach in public schools, has no right to act as agent for any school book company, provided books sold by such company are used in the public schools. This ruling was given by Turner to Frank W. Miller, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. In another ruling to Miller, Turner held that where a boy or girl stays away from school and aids a parent while at work all persuasive means should be exhausted before the school officials resort to the courts in an effort to compel attendance at school. Georgetown (O.) News-Democrat.

This is a wise ruling. Many teachers while acting for book companies, receive pay for placing books in school contrary to the standard adopted by the State Board. We personally know where teachers have caused a great deal of confusion and expense by introducing their "pet tract books."

We also know of unbridled dictionaries and other valuable books being used as "influencers" upon not only the teachers, but upon Boards of Education.

We thought the day had passed away, but find by the above clipping it is again cropping out in Ohio. We trust the day when such bribery will be so far removed that it will not dare show itself again in our schools in any State.

WAR VETERAN DEAD

GLASS EYE FOR THE BABY

Child Uses Toy Cat's Optic, Which She Thinks Looks Much Prettier.

St. Joseph, Mo.—When Mrs. E. F. Gaeckler, wife of a St. Joseph merchant, noticed that one of the eyes of her three-month-old baby was irritated, she took the child to a physician. He found nothing wrong with the eye.

The child continued to cry and the mother took it to an oculist, who removed a concave glass that fitted snugly over the eyeball. A three-year-old sister had taken a glass from a toy cat's eye and placed it in the baby's eye because she thought it prettier.

AGED GRANDMOTHER

So Weak She Could Hardly Stand—Made Strong By Vinol.

Right here in Mayville we have seen such excellent results from Vinol that it is a pleasure to know it is doing so much good for old people in other parts of the country.

Woodbridge, N. J.—"My Grandma was recovering from the grippe and was so weak she could hardly stand, and as she keeps house for my father and myself, she could not get around at all. She had taken cod liver oil and many other medicines, but nothing seemed to do her any good. At last we heard of Vinol and tried it, and Grandma commenced to feel better right away and got strong very soon, so she gets around as well as ever. We all praise Vinol for it is a splendid medicine." Myrtle H. Bunn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in restoring strength to the aged is because of the rare combination of tonic iron, the curative medicinal extracts of fresh cod's livers, beef peptone and a mild native wine. It supplies iron to the blood, quickens the appetite, aids digestion, promotes proper assimilation of food, and enriches the blood and brings back the strength of renewed health.
